Teaching:UCLA School of Nursing, 1989 – 1993

I taught in the clinical oncology option in the Medical-Surgical/Physiologic Section, and focused upon the cross-cultural aspects of nursing care in the Master's and Doctoral programs. I also taught the advanced nursing research core course, and courses in cross-cultural health care. I taught on average, 2-3 courses per quarter (6-9 courses/year), with numerous guest lectures.

Public Health, 1994-present

My teaching focuses on public health issues in multicultural communities, primarily in the Asian Pacific American population, with a focus on chronic and life-threatening diseases along the care continuum. I emphasize operationalization and measurement of the concepts of culture and ethnicity to assess the effects of these constructs on health status. My focus is on research and practice efforts to reduce the disparities in chronic disease outcomes in ethnic minority and underserved populations.
